Conservationists' Views Gain At 15-Nation Whaling Talks LONDON, July 1 (NYT). - observe a ban on the hunting of

Evidence emerged at the 26th annual meeting of the International Whaling Commission in London last week that the 15 member nations, succumbing to world opinion, were giving priority to the survival of the whale over the interests of the whaling mousty.

The evidence was scarcely enough to satisfy those who call for a total moratorium on the killing of whales, However, a resolution calling for selective moratoriums encouraged hope that in the future whales would not be hunted to the point of

For the first time the commission has the power, under the res-olution, to impose a moratorium of indefinite duration on species before their numbers fall so low that it is no longer fessible to hunt them. In the past the commission has imposed moratoriums only on whales that had been reduced to commercial, if not hiological, extinction.

Fin Whale

The first selective moratorium, to take effect next year, is certein to cover the fin whale. There are estimated to be no more than 100,000 of them, three-quarters of their number having been killed. The fin is the largest of four whales still hunted profitably. mostly by the Russians and the Japanese. Together, they account in equal shares for about 85 percent of the world's total annual whale catch.

The Soviet Union and Japan were the only countries that voted against the selective moratorium. Although they opposed the resolution, it is thought that they would

Growing Confidence

Growing confidence that the Soviet Union and Japan will now accede to the wishes of conservationists against their own whaling interests was widely shared among other delegates at the weeklong meeting here.

"One of the great pluses of this meeting," a Western delegata said, "was the attitude of the Russians. They seemed quite prepared to accept more readily the conservationist measures being proposed. In fact, they were quite cooperative."

The Japanese, on the other hand, "stonewalled virtually everything," the delegate added.
"But the strong tide running against their exploitation of the whalo and the boycott of Japanese goods by American consum-ers must make them reconsider their attitudes."

Brandt Looks to New Career Mending, Rebuilding Party

By David Binder

BONN, July 1 (NYT).—Down but not out after his resignation as chancellor, Willy Brandt says that he is picking up the thres of a new career, confident that he will have more to do and in West German politics. "I am convinced I had to resign." Brandt said of the spy-in-the-chancellery affair that led to stepping down on May 6. But I am not in a mood of resigna-

His voice was cheery at he was interviewed recently in his home here. Although he made it clear that he was not certain what tasks lay shead of him, he seemed enthusiastic about staying on chairman of the governing Social Democratic party He saye that he intends to run for the chairmanship again in 1975 and then again in 1977. He has held the post for 10 years.

Could he imagine an arrangement that would induce him to be chancellor again or to accept some Common Market post? Mr. Brandt shook his head to indicate: "No." Is the party chair-manship enough? "Just that," he

Revitalizing Party

He is concentrating for the time being on revitalizing his party. The Social Democrats suffered a series of state election sethacks this spring. And they were profoundly shocked by his resignation and by bitter rivalries within the party.

Last month Mr. Brandt began the first of a series of 15 "working conferences" with rank-andfile members in a meeting a Borken, in northern Hesse,

He took responsibility for the "unraveling" of the party in recent months, suggesting that this had created a "gap in expectations" among the voters because of unfulfilled promises of reforms, and had led to a "hermony gap" in the party itself,

Mr. Brandt was so heartened by the reception he got in Borken that he now feels encouraged to work more for "integration" of the embattled young left and the old right in his party.

But at the same time it has helped to solidify his support in Quebec, from which come more His crowd appeal and personal charm seem undiminished. In his 61st year, Mr. Brandt is regarded generally as better qualified to hold the party together emotionthan either Chancellor Hei out Schmidt or Mr. Brandt's long-time chief party deputy and strategist, Herbert Wehner. But some of Mr. Brendt's former aldes are skeptical. "Let's wait to see how he looks in September," one said.

his international contacts grad-ually. President Tito of Yugoslavia, here the last week in June on his first state visit to West Germany, asked for a meeting with Mr. Brandt, They conferred twice. Mr. Brandt has also recelved a dozen invitations to the United States and Britain. The Soviet Communist party chairman, Leonid Brezhnev, has asked Mr. Brandt to Moscow, an invitation he will take up unly after Chancellor Schmidt has visited the Soviet Union-perhaps next year.

In the wake of the spy case, a high Bonn official said, Mr. Brandt has received especially warm, even good-humored messages from Mr. Brezhnev, whom he had seen three times since 1970 "at. some length. But Mr. Brandt will probably never find anything humorous about the placement of an last German agent, Guenter Guillaume, in his chancellery as an executive assistant for party affairs.

Mr. Brandt feels that he cannot talk to or about East Germans in an official capacity. He is resentful, too, about some highly placed party colleagues who, he feels, let him down during the last 12 months. When he is reminded of these recent unpleasantries, he begins pacing around the room, puffing on cigarettes. He has taken up smoking again after an abstention of 18 months; it seems to help him relax.

View of the Past

When he looks back, he prefers to think of his schievement as chancelor. # Tragic Absurdity

Luther King sr., as she played the organ in church, is the reduction to tragic absurdity of the present cult of violence. Whether the killer acted upon the private instructions of his private god, or whether be was part of a conspiracy against certain black leaders. the deed can only shame him and whatever cause a sick mind could associate with his

Let despite, or rather because of, its apparent irrelevancy to any conceivable human goal, the shooting in Atlanta's Ebenezer Baptist Church holds its own moral. Mrs. King was the shyly femous mother of a famous son, himself gunned down in the interest of some allegedly public purpose. What distinguishes her death from that of the Israeli mother and her little children at the hands of Palestinian terrorists at Nahariya? Or the many who have died in Northern Ireland from bomh blasts and gunfire? Or, to go back in time, to the assassination of Archduke Franz Ferdinand and his wife hy young Gavrilo Princip in Serajevo, 60, years ago, which touched off the first global war?

It will be said, of course, that the Palestinians and the Ulstermen, that Princip and his associates, were battling for principle, that their acts were acts of war, noble in purpose, on behalf of this, that or the other suffering people. Governments and political movements honor the perpetrators, men and

On its face, the murder of Mrs. Martin women of social conscience analyze the roots of their actions and find in themselves more sympathy for the criminals than for their victims. And so the mood spreads, the mood in which private judgment can be honored above the laws that society has created for the common good

Before Mrs. King's death gave bitter confirmation of his conclusions, Bayard Rustin. a thoughtful and distinguished leader in the U.S. civil rights movement, condemned the "romantic speculation and thoroughly confused thinking" aroused by the Symbionese Liberation Army as evidence of the fact that "society seems to be increasingly tolerant of violent acts. as long as they are committed in the name of social justice."

Today there are more instruments for nchleving social justice through peaceful means than at any other time in human history. That Justice has not, of course, been attained-but it is also true that justice is largely in the eye of the beholder, what is right to one is wrong to another. Who is to decide? Each individual has his own private responsibility to determine what is right or wrong: be does not have the moral authority, and should not have the social permission, to enforce that right at gunpoint, whether by killing, kidnapping or theft. And it is a primary obligation of every civilized society to see that no excuse of despair or aspiration is used to justify private war. For private war only spreads the bell and increases the tbreat of public war.

Trade, Détente...

The evolving accommodation between the United States and the Soviet Union reflected in the Nixon-Brezhnev summit meeting in Moscow bas taken both countries a goodly distance from their starting point in January, 1971, when Mr. Nixon wrote his first personal letter as President to the Soviet leader. But it would be an error to forget the fundamental transaction that initiated this "era of negotiation" between the two superpowers and helped shape the Kremlin foreign policy that was announced, along with a new fiveyear plan for the economy, at the Soviet Communist party congress in March of that year.

In that transaction, the Kremlin's primary motivation in offering detente was to obtain American technology, trade, credits and managerial skill to advance the Soviet Union's lagging economy and llving standards. President Nixon offered economic exchanges as the quid pro quo for détenteand for the Soviet cooperation that détente implied, in such matters as ending the Vietnam war.

Full implementation of that agreement, which was embodied in indirect form in the May, 1972, summit communiqué, bas been blocked by the Jackson Amendment, originally sponsored by 76 senators, which in effect would make U.S. trade and credits conditional on free emigration from the Soviet Union. Soviet concessions, many negotiated by the administration's "quiet diplomacy," bave eroded some of Sen. Jackson's support, but Mr. Nixon's most delicate task during bis visit to Moscow will be to seek further compromises between the Kremlin and the Jackson positions to open the way for passage of the pending trade bill.

Jewish emigration, which rose to a rate of over 30,000 a year, bas now dropped back to about 2,000 a month and Moscow evidently has indicated a willingness almost to double it. Many senators want not only a higher rate but, perbaps even more important, a halt in harassment of those who apply for exit visas and rapid resolution of a number of hardship cases.

...and Emigration

Secretary of State Kissinger framed the issue for the Senate in his predeparture press conference when he asked whether it was wise, whatever skepticism there is about detente and arms control negotiations, for "every positive incentive for restrained conduct" by the Soviet Union to be "systematically closed off." Do the critics of detente want to return to confrontation and tension? The country clearly does not,

Nevertheless, it is incomprehensible that the Soviet government makes Mr. Nixon's task with the Senate more difficult than necessary by refraining from some gestures which it could easily make. The emigration issue involves not only Soviet Jews who wish to go to Israel but a dozen so-called "dual nationality cases involving U.S. citizens long resident in the Soviet Union who wish to return home and bundreds of Soviet citizens who wish to be reunited with their families in America.

About a third of those on a list of 660 names handed to Soviet officials a year ago have now received exit visas. There is no reason why the others should not be permitted to leave in the wake of the summit conference if Mr. Nixon will forcefully put this case to Mr. Brezhnev.

The President and Mr. Kissinger have been right to point out that Americans cannot expect their government to bring about the transformation of the Sovlet system into a democracy as the price for détente and trade. The hope must be that liberalization will follow detente; it is more likely to be prevented than accelerated by excessive outside pressure, as Soviet dissident historian Roy Medvedev long has argued.

But the trade-emigration stalemate clearly has reached the point now where a major effort must be made on both sides to find an accommodation. Secretary Kissinger appears to be ready to force the issue in the Senate on his return from Moscow. He will need more help than yet has been forthcoming from the Soviet government to do so success-

Summitry as Usual With Fewer Frills

By Joseph Kraft

MOSCOW-When President Nixon came here for his first Moscow summit two years ago, the city had been spruced un in dozens of different ways. This time there has been no refurbishing.

That is a sign that the Russians now assess the President at lower value and may even be tempted to take advantage of his weakness. But it is also-and this is far more important, I think —an indication that Big-Two summit meetings have entered the realm of business as usual.

Beyond any shadow of a doubt the Russians are fully informed of Mr. Nixon's troubles at home. That fact is shouted from the rooftons, in effect, by a dealening Nobody official speaks of Watergate in public.

But privately there's no holding the Russians, The first Moscow friend I saw on coming back here Thursday asked me as soon as we went off for a drink whether Nixon would "inevitably be im-peached?" The next two asked if he had any support in the United States at all. After that I stopped counting.

Nobody Impressed

The show of strength which the President tried to make by stopping off at NATO beadquarters in Brussels on the way to Moscow impressed nobody bere. A journalist friend immediately observed that the French did not send their President.

A Russian said airily of his visit, "We're just taking the temperature." Two referred to troubles ahead for Mao Tse-tung. In these conditions, it is easy

Possible Ploys

They could sign him up on a trade deal which would imply American acceptance of this country's harsh policies toward minorities, and many other Russian citizens. They could lure him into an arms deal which would allow them to translate their superiority in the payload capability of nuclear weapons into a superiority in accuracy and numbers of warbeads.

But Mr. Nixon can avoid these pitfalls. He will not get burned if he concentrates on setting forth general principles of trade, while leaving the details to other and future talks. Similarly, if he sets out the basic elements of an understanding on limiting qualitative developments in offensive nuclear weapons without spelling out exact details.

In short, the choice is between self-interest and national interest. Self-interest dictates. dramatic personal diplomacy. But the national interest lies m avoiding drama, in playing it long, in having a summit as usual, leading to another summit as usual, and another and another.

Officials do not minimize the difficulties of dealing with inflation. After the quadrupling of oil prices last year, other commodity rises were an inescapable reality. Trade unions are so powerful in this country that trey cannot be restrained without enormous political consequences.

But officials point out that inflation is terrible elsewhere, too worse, for example, in Italy and Japan. They say that some inflation may be a necessary price for economic growth, these days, and that it is better than the alternative of mass-unemployment. They express the none that society will find ways of adjusting to the new situation without upheaval.

Yet Mr. Peron signed the first contract permitting U.S. oil companies to drill on lands set aside for the Argentine state monopoly. A successor who expanded on the Peron approach, Arkuro Frondizi, is still widely alleged to have sold out to the gringos, Gen. Peron also invited Kaiser Industries to take a major role in creation of an auto industry in Argentina.

But after the anti-Peron coup. which was brief but bloody hy Argentine standards, the accusations of anti-Peronists centered more oo his sex life. The generals who took over formally accused him of having set up a 14year-old courtesan in the presidential palace following Eva's death.

Gen. Peron was permitted to go into exila aboard a Paraguayan gunboat. He was dismissed from the army, La Prensa was returned to its owners, and all the streets named Peron were

Others are now named to a loog string of unsolved murders of Peronist labor leaders, many of them having neen accused of dealing too openiy with management. Mr. Perou s seeming obsession with keeping all leadership to his own bands has left the nation of 24 million with few visible leaders. Recurrent military interventions have not helped either. The military's longest period of direct rule began in 1966. A civilian president was deposed because the Peronists were expected to wio a forthcoming eleccon that they were being permitted to coolest to a limited 7. Ry.

But three successive generals were unable to move Argentina oward the grandeur that most Argentioes seem to be assured is their desilny. The bulk of the Perooist labor movement collaborated with management and, more or less directly, with the military.

NEW YORK, July 1 (NYT).—
She has been honored and vilified, applauded and attacked, called too conservative hyliberals and too liberal by conservatives. Now in her eighth decade, Dr. Mery Steichen Calderone etill stands stalwartly ee the voice of reason on the subject of sex and as the eloquent advocate of both its poetry and science. She is celebrating a dual birthday today: her own 70th birthday and the 10th anniversary of SIECUS, the Sex Information and Education Council of the United States, the organization of which she is a founder and executive

"Seventy years old!" she ex-claimed, "I can't wait to see what's coming next." What came before was a series of detours leading to her crusade for sexual freedom and understanding. Daughter of photogranher Edward Stelchen and a graduate of Vassar College, she studied acting but "gave it up when I found I wasn't good

She was married, had two daughters, one of whom died at 8, and was divorced. At age $4, she got her medical degree from the University of Rochester and later a master's of public health from Columbia University. In 1941, she was married to Dr. Frank Calderone, who has served as chief administrator of the World Health Organization. They had two daughters.

But the die wasn't really cast until 1953, when she hecame medical director of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America, and she didn't organize SIECUS until she was 60.

"Most of us (SIECUS leaders and other authorities) believe in sexual evolution, not revolution, she said, conceding only that "all change is speeded up now." The evolution, she claims, began in 1910 "that is, for the women horn in 1910, who grew up in the F. Scott Fitzgerald era. It's just that now more of us are doing more of the same things. And we're freer to talk about it and figure out what we're doing, why we're doing it, what we want, what our relative values are."

It was the need for humanization of sex that spurred Dr. Calderone and others to establish SIECUS as an education and information organization.

JAZZ: Montreux Opens On a Blues and Gospel Note

By Henry Pleasants

MONTREUX, Switzerland, July 1 (IHT).—The opening nights of Montreux's 8th International Jazz Festival have been devoted not to jazz, but to blues and, an innovation for Montreux, to gospel, The star of the inaugural "heavy blues" program Friday was Muddy Waters, as he was two years ago, and by the end of his set when, inevitably, he "got his mojo working," the youngsters packing the Malson de Congrès were standing on their seats, joining in and clamoring for more.

Earlier in the evening they had relished the opportunity of hearing in the flesh for the first time two of the legendary figures of the mid-century Chicago blues scene, Junior Wells and Buddy Guy. Wells, who many years ago succeeded Little Walter as harmonicist (or "harpist" in blues terminology: in the Muddy Waters Band, surprised everyone on this occasion by doing as much singing as playing, and hy singing very well, backed by Buddy Guy's oratorically eloquent and rhythmically compelling guitar.

With Waters's arrival, Wells deferred to the older man and joined with Guy in providing urgent, lyrical backing for such familiar classics as Waters's own "I'm a Howlin' Wolf." "Hoochie Coochie Man," "I'm a Man," and, of course, "Got My Mojo Working." Also in the backing group was bassist Bill Wyman, of the Rolling Stones. This was a last-minute casting, and an appropriate one, since Muddy Waters was the Rolling Stones' early idol and model, and toured with them often, as did both Guy and Wells. "Gospel night" (Saturday) brought us "The Stars of Faith," surviving the death of Clara Ward; the 21st Century Singers, an attractive young gospel group from Nashville, and the Rev. Isaac Douglas, a stentorian-voiced, extrovert, irrepressible 20d apparently inexhaustible preacher and shouter working in and rather beyond the style of James Cleveland. He was closer to the church, and to the blues, too, or rather rhythm-and-hines, than the Stars of Faith, who offered their familiar and, to me, dispiriting, concert caricature of what gospel once was and can still be, shricking and screaming above an unseemly din of electric organ and grossly over-amplified piano.

The young audience was ecstatic. The Rev. Douglas kept shouting happily, "I've gotta church!" He may not have "had a church." but he certainly had a congregation. A remarkable Swiss gospel group. Les Compagnons du Jourdain, who sang for a religious service in the Malson de Congrès yesterday morning, may not have had so schools, now it's taught in more than 100."

"The movement toward greater openness began in many places, but we rode the crest of a wave. We promote concepts, the idea of the wholeness of the person as a male or female.

"I now see in this country a strong core of people in all the professions and in the public for whom the word 'sexuality' has acquired great meaning, people I never would have met five years

"Those pcople con't ever intend to let its meaning revert to a quick roll in the hay. Sex is not just a series of genital acts. It plays an integral part in all our relationships, not just in bed. It is the key to our being."

While Dr. Calderone rejoices in the enlightenment, she has no illusions about tasks that await, about myths that must still be

"We're still a strongly antisex society. Fundamentally, we're scared, and still trying to represe others," she said, noting that she has been called "a moral degenerate and an aging libertine by ex-treme right wing groups."

"And look at the report of the 1970 Federal Commission on Obscenity and Pornography," she went on. "That tells us more about our sexuality than anything else. That report [which recom-mended the abolition of restrictions on sexually explicit publica-tions and films for adults] was rejected not only by the Presideni but hy 60 senators. Now do you think none of those senators ever bought anything obscene?

"In the end, nobody can legislate for another human being," she said. "Ws can have no moral policemen ... not even parents. Some of the most sexually active teen-agers I've met have been the children of clergy.

Without giving it that label Dr. Calderone a devout Quaker is adamant about one form of morality; civil rights.

"We won't have civil rights until we have sexual human rights, until we understand, for e, that the homosexual is not a rapist nor someone who suddenly chose his orientation at age 14 or 15. We won't have civil rights until we have adequate contraceptive care for minors, until we have free access to information for people of all ages, until we recognize the rights of the handicapped and the aging." The assumption that neither the sged nor the handicapped have the right to sexuality particularly angers her.

We desexualize anyone who is in an institution or dependent on others for care," she said. "Even on the outside, we tell the elderly that it's all over for them, that it's something to snicker at, when, in fact, men don't begin to lose their potence urtil they are 70, and women ar: active into their

Pros, Cons of Women Designers

By Hebe Dorsey

PARIS, July 1 (IHT).-Every time the fashion pendulum swings from stiff and structured to soft and supple, the designing cards change hands-from men

This is what is happening now. After World War II, fashion was dominated by such male giants as Dior, Fath, Balenciaga, Balmain, Castillo, Cardin and Desses. Schiaparelli tried a hrief comeback and failed. The only woman designer of stature then-as now-was Madame Gres. Chanel re-opened in 1954 but it took three years for her to re-impose Today, women designers are back in force. Some are world stors, others minor satellites. But their number is significant.

In England, since Mery Quant paved the way with miniskirts, two women have made it to the top, Jean Muir and Zandra Rhodes. London also has Gina Frattini and Laura Ashley. In Italy, the shining Missoni name really means Rosita Missoni, whose husband Vittorio helps with

In France, the list of women designers is long and keens crowing longer-Sonia Rykiel, Emmanuelle Khanh, Jacqueline Ja-cobson (Dorothee Bis), Lison Bonfils, Christiane Bailly, Vicky Tiel and Renata

The main difference between a man and a woman designer, as Karl Lagerfeld (Chloéi sees it, is that "a woman designs with herself in mind" then projects her own personality on other women. Whereas a man starts from a vision, his own concept of the ideal woman." In other words, women start from their own bodles whereas men work with a

The nomen was was used successful at designing for herself then imposing her style on other women was the late Coco Chanel. Since she was a beautiful woman, she had a deep-rooted sense of security that carried over into her designs. Women who wore Chanel clothes felt secure. An exception to the rule was Madeleine Vionnet, who never thought about herself when she worked because she hated her looks. "I only like tall and slender women," she once said, "and there I was, short and of Rossinia "The Barber of Se-

There is a lot to be said both for and against clothes by women designers. At best, they tend to be more thought out, more casual and more functional than those designed by men. They are also more comfortable. Jean Muir, for instance, always puts one type of woman in mindtheir own-the range tends to be more limited. Clothes designed by women are strongly personal and easily identhiable. Jean Muir is tiny and reserved, which accounts for her pared-down look and subtle at times almost sad shades. Zandra Rhodes is flamboyant and witty -and that shows in her clothes. Sonia Rykiel "s not have good legs, which is why, as she often said: "I prefer long skirts." Christione Bailly tends to be moody which explains why, although she has done excellent clothes she has never been able to impose a single style. Emmanuelle Khanh is a sporty type so it follows that culottes are among her best designs.

It boils down to timing. Now that women want soft, fluid clothes, women designers are having a field day. But sooner or later, the pendulum will swing in the other direction and then men designers will be back in the

Japan Reported To Tighten Rules On Eurodollars

TOKYO, July 1 (Reuters) --Local benking sources said today that the Bank of Jepan has tightened its unofficial guidance over the takings of Burodollar deposits by Japanese banks in view of the uncertainties created by the collapse of Bankhaus Hers-

They said the bank has extended the unofficial guidance, formerly confined to 13 major banks and the Industrial Bank of Japan, to other long-term credit banks, trust banks, and some provincial banks.

The banks are to submit monthly foreign exchange funding plans to the Bank of Japan, which scrutinizes them regarding the utilization of the funds and the raising of funds-including borrowings from U.S. banks, takings of Eurodollar deposits, and pur-chases of dollars with yen in the Tokyo market. ### Zurich Votes Tax on Rich

ZURICH, July 1 (AP-DJ) .- The residents of Switzerland's most populous canton voted yesterday to impose the steepest income tax in the country on the top bracket income earners.

But they rejected a more radical tax bill proposed by Socialists that had fineatened to drive the international bankers out of Under the new tax law approved by a large majority, an income of one million Swiss francs (about $325,000) will be taxed a total of 461,000 france in federal, state and municipal levies.

Taxes on moderate incomes will main largely the same. Under the previous rate, the tax on one million france was 374,000 frames. The Socialists' bill would have raised that to 533,000 francs.

The Socialist proposal, to boost tax levies by up to 58 percent and more for the rich, was backed by the trade unions, intent on changing the canton's income and tax

Hans Muller, president of the cantonal Socialist Party, said after the balloting that the fear of an exodus by the rich was the major factor in the defeat of the Socialist bill.

Conservative groups and Zurich authorities warned that the steep tax hike threatened to ruin the canton's economy driving the rich out and reducing overall tax

Oil Price Raised By Venezuela to $14.43 a Barrel

CARACAS. July 1 (Reuters) .-Venezuela today mcreased its average posted price for export crude oil to $14.43 a barrel from 514.08. Mines and Hydrocarbons Minister Valentin Hernandez said

The rise applies directly to light crudes and is effective immediately, he said. This will increase government income from oil exports by about 24 U.S. cents a barrel during the second half of 1974, he said. Other members of the Organiration of Oil Exporting Countries were advised of Venezuela's decision to raise posted prices dur-ing a recent OPEC conference in Quito, Ecuador, Mr. Hernandez

The OPEC member-countries felt that foreign oil companies should not pass on the higher cost of Venezuelan crudes and petroleum derivatives to consumers in the form of higher prices because the increase in costs could be covered by the companies from their current earnings in Venezuela, he said.

Venezuela's decision to raise posted oil prices is aimed at eliminating a difference between sale prices of Venezuelan light crudes and similar crudes from other oil exporting areas, he said.

happen In the U.S.A.

And the state that is economically strongest in the U.S.A. is CALIFORNIA, WHOSE GROSS PRODUCT IS EXCEEDED BY ONLY SIX NATIONS IN THE WORLD — including the U.S. California has the largest population, largest economy, largest economic diversifi-cation, and largest profit potential for the international investor. And California has the largest land-brokerage firm, Pre-Builder Land Corporation - the internationally recognized leader in California land investment.

PBL is licensed by the stringent California Real Estate Commission, and for a decade and a half PBL has guided its clients into safe, profitable land investments. (We are the international subsidiary of PBL, serving investors worldwide.) In these days of uncertainty in currency fluctuation, government regulations, nationalisation, and inflation, it's good to know that there's at least one place left in the world that you can be sure of. And at least one investment source that still makes a profit for its clients.

LONDON, July 1 (NYT):—A prestigious economic advisory body warned today that the sharp body warned today that the sharp increase in oil prices will mean major changes in British life styles for years to come.

The National Economic Development Office, whose opinions and reports are closely watched by both the government and in-

by both the government and in-dustry, suggested that people's spending power would decline sharply and impings on various sectors of British industry.

Although the group's report related only to Britam, its conclusions are applicable to most industrialized nations whose sharply energy costs are rising sharply because of the huge increase in oil prices initiated last fall by producer nations in the Middle

The report examined the impact of higher oil prices on 59 industries responsible for 80 percent of the manufacturing output in Britain. Among its conclusions were the following:

Demand for automobiles will be reduced because the cost of running a car will be 40 percent greater in 1977 than in 1973.

has someone relatively low on the Watergate totem pole to offer, except excuses for himself?) And for a while at least, one's disdain holds sway. Indeed, how else is one to respond to the moral flabbless Magruder evinces while recounting his youth and early career? How is one to react to his admission that he discovered early in life how easy it was for him to "wangle" his way with his charm, and good looks? Or to his statement, explaining why he felt a certain falling out between his college fraternity and its national office "was ridiculous," that: I couldn't see how it was going to dishonor Phi Delta. Theta to have one Jew in its Williams chapter"? Or to the too-feeble objections he raises to jobs he held as a young man that involved manufacturing faulty merchandise or selling goods by illegitimate means?

And how else but with disdain is one to react to the profoundly superficial manner in which Magruder embraced his political calling? To the shallowness of his philosophy, which is summed up in its totality by the statements: "As a college student. majoring in political science, I had learned I was more comfortable with the conservative point of view than with the liberal T wanted to see less big government and more individual reliance"? To the longing for status, power, glamour and the approval of his superiors that seems to have moved him to strive and succeed in the Nixon administration? And to his concern for the images and shadows of Nixon's programs, rather than their realities and substance?

Judging from the first half of "An American Life." Jeb Stuart : Magruder grew up .as a paradism of the youth of the. 1950s—outer-directed, morally almiess and enger to succeed by whatever standard: that prevail-ed. He leaped aboard the Nixon stateship from the cosmetics industry (where, for a time he owned a sales and manufacturing concern while simultaneously working as a cosmetics buyer for a chain of department stores— a situation whose potential for conflict; of interest he doesn't bother to comment upon). Working as a special assistant to the President, he would be received to rig telegram campaigns in support of Nixon's controversial decisions. As the man in characteristics. decisions. As the man in charge of planning for the Committee to Re-Riect the President, he would help to engineer the cover-up of the Watergate breakin. Outer-directedness, cosme-tics cover-up, it is all of a piece. And so a reader exercises his

(After all, what as if he were saying, "Given my as if he were saying, "Given mybackground, the era in which I came of age, and the circumstances of my upbringing what else can you expect but that given the right sort of presures, I was doomed to break the law." While such a message would seem thoroughly repus nant if it were articulated sciously. it remains so subtle that one doubts whether Ma gruder was aware of delivering it. And considering its apparent lack of calculation, one begins to feel a certain syn-

Of course "An American Life"
Is intended to convey many other things besides a portrai of Magruder's character. It is also a coherent and dramatic in side account of how Watergate lively character sketches the throw interesting new light on the people in the Nixon admin. istration whom Magnuder admires (John Mitchell, Egil Kros and Frederick LaRue), on the people he has mixed feelings about (Richard Nixon, E.R. Haldeman and Martha Mitchell and on the people he doesn't admire at all (Charles Colson Ronald Ziegler, Robert Finch and Gordon Liddy).

It is a somewhat desperate attempt to rescue from chilvion the positive accomplishments of the Committee to Re-Elect the President (Magrader believes that the 1972 Nixon campaign remains "the best-planned best organized, best-run presidential campaign in American history" and that it will be a positive guideline for the future). And it is an indictment of the guilty tinefuding himself) and an attempt to exonerate the someont (on the question of the Presi-dent's involvement, Magnuder fudges somewhat. On the one hand, he states I know nothing to indicate that Nixon was aware in advance of the plan to break into the Democratic headquar-ters. [but] I. would suspect that once the burglars were ar-rested. Nixon immediately de-manded and got the full story, and that thereafter he kept in close personal touch with the cover-up operation, through Mitother hand he creates are overwhelming impression thur-nothing, but nothing, was done by anyone in the administration without express orders from the boss.

Still, what remains most are resting about this continually interesting book is the problem of Magruder's character, and the unusual degree to which, inten-tionally or not, he has connected it to his conduct. Some readers will doubtless dismiss this as meaningless another Magruder exercise, in salesmanship—on the grounds that explanations for human behavior are nothing. while the capacity to make abstract ethical decisions is all. Other readers will be touched by the unwittingly honest partrait he has drawn of himself. on the grounds that there is a distinction between explanations and excuses. As for me, I found myself tending toward the latter view, since I don't believe any of us can escape our histories. When all was said and done, my disdain melted into something like understanding. ...

Dutch, West Germans Appear Headed for Final

By Brian Glanville

MUNICH, July 1 (IHT).-There seems a certain inevitahility now about a West Germanythe Netherlands World Cup soccer final, but no inevitability at all about what would happen when they meet. Both the West Germans and the Dutch need only a point from their matches Wednesday against Poland, in Frankfurt, and Brazil, in Dort-mund, respectively. Both seem more likely to win than to draw. Poland has won every match so far and has surpassed itself. But the small miracle seems to me to be coming to an end. As for the Brazilians, they are coming in on a wing and a prayer. a triumph of mind over matter. or perhaps of that celebrated luck which their fine manager. Mario Zagalo, is supposed to enjoy. Few who saw them stagger to a lucky draw against Yugoslavia in the opening match of the tournament in Frankfurt would have forecast that at this late stage they would still have a chance of reaching the final. T still believe that had Pele played. Brazil would have won the World Cup, that had even Gerson, Tostao or Ciodoaloo been spared, it would have come very near it. But Brazil seems unlikely to halt the majestic progress of the Netherlands.

Johan Cruyff, when I visited the Dutch training camp at Hiltrup, respectfully called Luis Pereira. Brazil's powerful eenier half, "a great player." But Cruyif also is a very great player. and I do not helieve the Brazilare capable of countering his electric twists and turns.

A Dutch television commentator who saw Brazil's 2-1 victory over Argentine yesterday remarked tolerantly that it would no doubt have been judged a very good game by South American standards; Europeans now expect rather more. Above all, he felt both teams were slow, end lack of pace is fatel against and team as quick as the Dutch. Now that the Brazilian goal has fallen at last, albeit to that freakish free kick (the hiter bit, indeed) by Miguel Brindist, I think more Brazil still basn't begun to and must continue to sacrifice Jairzmho there, with an indifferent winger on either side of him. He headed a good goal against Argentina, thanks to Ze Maria's mighty overlap from right-back after winning the ball in the high old tradition of that great Brazilian fullback, Djalma Sansos, Pivelino's aplendid, swerving shot, which brought the first Brazilian goal, was a char-seteristic gem, hut if Brazil scores two on Wednesday, 1 think the Dutch will score three. Or even solve its center forward problem.

Defensive Question

Much the same might he said of the West Germans when they piay the resourceful Poles. I still think very little of the Germans' defense, in which Georg Schwarzenbeck is eternally viilnerable, and even the much lauded Berti Vogts has a strange tendency to get on the wrong side of his man. Grzegorz Lato and Robert Gaoocha, that gaivanic pair, are just the men to exploit such failings, but can Poland's own, porous defense keep out the West Germans?

Sweden's defense, as the Poles found in Stuttgart, is a tough, well organized affair, but the West Germans simply overran it in Duesseldorf last night for a 4-2 triumph. The arrival of Raine Bonhof in midfield has given bite to the defense and further thrust to the attack. He scored one goal -e shot off both posts-but might well have had a couple more, and his physical condition is splenged. Uli Hoeners, after an uncertain beginning, seems to have found the glorious form he was showing for Bayern, his club, in the European Cup, carrying the ball long distances from his own balf of the field, or sprinting outside the left back to the goal line, to cross with equal facility. And if Gerd Mueller is allegedly not at full, formidable efficiency, he still makes more trouble in the penalty box with his opportunism and his strength than any center forward in the competition but

Johan Cruvil. The Yugoslavs are softly and silently vanishing awey. There Heather Greenwood after 150 seems to be trouble in the camp. Heather Greenwood after 150 meters and steadily pulled away. Officially, Dragan Dzajic, their outside left, captain and most distinguished player, did not operate against Poland because he had a heavy cold. It is an open secret, however, that he was sharply and publicly critical of the tactics of his coach, Miljan Miljanic, in the game against West Germany, and that he was dropped in consequence, it was an indulgence the Yugoslave could scarcely afford, though it was good at long last to see them bring on Dzahc's club mate from Red Star, Vladimir Petrovic, nicknamed "The Little Pigeon" or Dzalic the Second.

I still find it hard to understand why Miljanic, who is also the Red Star coach, bas kept a player of Petrovic's precocious skills and initiative waiting in the wings, while modest figures such as Rija Pelkovie and Danilo Popivoda have been preferred.

From Munich, there is news that the Haitian goalkeeper, Prancillon, will be back in the city from Port au Prince on Friday, to play for the Munich 1860 eluh. He will be bringing a letter for Herr Kurt Renner, West German liaison officer to the Haitian team, from Ernst Jean Joseph, the defender found "guilty" of taking drugs and bundled back home by the Ton Tons Macoute. Thanks in no small measure to Herr Renner's protests to the police, and those of a Munich World Cup hostess, Maria Hamelaz. Jean Joseph is safe with his family. Renner was informed of this by the team's masseur, Marc Oriol, from Port au Prince. Oriol also left him a signed voter, dedicated "to the man who made me like West Germany." Let the organization committee, who jettisoned Herr Renner, read, mark and inwardly digest.

Ed Garvey, executive director of the NFL Players' Association announced the action would be initiated with the National Labor Relations Board regional nifice in Minneapolis. In the statement, Garrey also said the owners "have indicated that they will try to break the union through the use of rookies and free agents playing in prescason games."

Players Association president Bill Curry and Garvey also dispatched telegrams to rookies of four NFL clubs urging them to refuse to report when their eamps open this week. The telegrams to the rookics of the San Dlego Chargers, Dallas Cowboys, Hous-ten Oilers and Miami Dolphins noted that the veterans had gone on strike as of today and added:
"As an NFL player, we expect you to honor the picket line, Strongly sliggest you remain home until strike is settled."

Curry said at a news conference that the owners were attempting to impose "a pickup brand of football" on the fans by planning to play preseason games with rookies and free agents if the strike persists. "If anyone is turning their hacks on the fans, it's the owners," the Houston Oiler veteran said. "They've collected money in advance for preseason tickets and now they're trying to put them on as pickup games. "If the fans let them know they won't stand for it, the owners may come to their censes." Garvey said the association would not seek to have other unions boycott preseason camps at college campuses, but said that if an effort is made to play with rookies, "then we'll ask the other unions to honor our strike."

Negotiations with the owners' management council over a new contract broke off last Wednesday, foundering on a series of so-called "freedom issues" that would permit players to switch teams once their contracts expire and have a veto over trades

Girl, 16, Slows Down at End But Sets a U.S. Swim Mark

SANTA CLARA Calif., July 1 UPI - Karen Hazen, swimming under the world record pace for most of the race, yesterday settled for an American mark when she won the women's 1,500-meter freestyle at the Santa Clara international swimming meet.

Hazen, 16, a member of the Arden Hills (Calif.) Swim Team, was as much as four seconds under the pending world record of 18 minutes 48.30 seconds set by Jenny Turrall of Australia earlier this year. She finished in 16:49,415.

Hazen took the lead from meters and steadily pulled away. She was 2 seconds under the world record at the 1,300-meter mark and about even with 100 meters to go.

The high school senior said, "I couldn't go any faster. Coach Sherm! Chavoor told me to go out hard. I knew I was close to some sort of record because I could hear the crowd yelling. Jo Harshbarger, who beld the meet and American records at 17:15.67 and 16.54.14, finished second.

swimmer, finished fourth and set European record in the process. She was elocked in 17:04:20 to better her mark of 17:14-83. On the final day of the threeday, 36-event marathon, three more meet marks fell. Marcia Morey won the women's 100-meter hreaststroke in 1:1554. John Hencken of the host Santa Clara Swim Club, who set a meet mark earlier in the 200-mnter breaststroke, won the 100 breaststroke in 1:05.31 and Mike Bruner, the meet's only triple first-place winner, took the 1,500-meter freestyle in 16:03,84.

Watson Passes Weiskopf to Win

CHICAGO, July 1 (UPI),-Tom Watson shot the best round of the day, a 2-under-par 69, to win the $40,000 first prize in the Western Open golf tournament yesterday as front-running Tom Weiskopf bogeyed the 17th hole and double-bogeyed the final

Watson, 24, gained his first PGA tour victory by making up eight strokes on Weiskopf on the last round in the $200,000 event on the 7,000-yard, par-71 Butler National Golf Chib course.

It was the third straight week in which the tournament winner has been over par: Hale Irwin was 7 over in the U.S. Open and Jim Colbert 1 over before winning a playoff in the American classic. Watson finished the Western Open 3 over at 287. FINAL SCORES

Colson's Conversion

WASHINGTON.—When Charles W Colson got religion, the first person he wanted to break the news to was his grandmotherthe very same grandmother he had vowed to run over m 1972 to get Richard Nixon re-elected President. He knocked on door and cried "Granny, it's me, Charles."

-You go away. Charley." his grandmother said, "and take your car with you." "Granny, you don't understand.

Buchwald I'm not here to run you over. I've got religion now. I've come to pray with you." Colson's grandmother opened the door a couple of inches. You're joshing me, Charley boy." "It's true, Granny, I'm no longer the mean, dirty, rotten, unscrupulous trickster you used to bounce on your knee. I've been reborn, Granny."

She seemed to he hesitating. How do I know this ain't one of your tricks to get me out in the street so you can go VROOM
... VROOOOOMMM with your motor again."

"Ive got Sen, Harold Hughes with me. He'll tell you I mean it." "That's right, Granny," Sen. Rughes said, "Charley has made his peace and he's asking everyone to forgive him his sins." I ain't so sure I'm ready to forgive him. You know I was out flat on my back for six months after the 1972 election."

Discovered Art May Be a Raphael

HEISINKI July 1 (Reuters . -A painting on wood of the bead of John the Baptist, possibly by the Italian Renaissance master Raphael, has been discovered here, according to Finnish press

The present owner found the painting hanging in the bath-room at the house of an impoverished Finnish aristocrat, the reports said. But Finnish art experts said that without a thorough cleaning it will be difficult to establish whether it is a genuine Raphael or the work of one of his stu-

"All right," Colson's grandmother said. But leave your car keys out on the stoop." Colson came into the house with Sen. Hughes.

"Shall we kneel together?" Col-

"Not me," his grandmother re-"I haven't been able to kneel since you screamed out FOUR MORE YEARS' and then put your Oldsmobile into DRIVE." "That's all in the past, Granny. As a matter of fact, I've pleaded guilty and I'm going to be a witness against Nixon." "Don't blame you for that. I read the transcripts and it turns out the President didn't think too much of you. He called you a name dropper and used to laugh at you with Dean, Ehrlichman and Haldeman. My, Charley, I never thought anyone would play you for a sucker the way Nixon

"I have to forgive him, too, Granny, Since my conversion I can feel no animosity toward anyone, even the President of the United States."

"By gum, Charley, you really may be a changed man. It's hard for me to believe, of course, after what I've been through." "I want to make it up to you, Granny. I want to cleanse my The devil was in me in 1972. You understand that doo't you?

"I understand it, because you're my grandson. But what about all the other people you played dirty tricks on. What about the political ads. and the forged telegrams and the enemies list?" "I'm going to become a government witness, Granny, and make amends. I'm going to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth." "So help you God," Sen, Hughes added. "Anybody want any cider?" Colson's grandmother asked, "No, we've got to be going. We have miles to go before we sleep. All I want to know is, Granny, do you forgive?" "All right, Charley, I forgive you. But no more getting involvin presidential campaigns. ed

Colson smiled for the first time. "Cross my heart and bope to die."

A Monk's Battle to Save The Basque Language

By Jeffrey Robinson

ONATE, Spain (IHT).—It is a 12-kilometer drive from this small village in Guipuzcoa Province up into the hills to the Santuario de Aranzazu, a strikingly modern Franciscan monastery. There, the Rev. Lins Villagante, a monk who teaches at the monastery's school and is currently president of the Academia de la Lengua Vasca (Basque Language Academy), is fighting to keep Basque alive. The academy was formed in 1918 because people were oncerned over the future of Basque. Today, we continue to concerned over the nuture of besque. I carry, we are share much of those same concerns," Father Villasante said. "We are very much like the Académie Française in that our aim is to preserve our language and keep it pure. The difference is that our language is hardly ever spoken outside this area and it might be one of the world's most mysterious."

The mystery of Basque has long fascinated linguists.

"The first reference to the language appeared 1,000 years ago." Father Villasante continued. "It's on a parchment written in Spanish where a few Basque words are used. What it tells us is that there were people speaking the language a millennium ago. But that's all we know. Our language remains without a beginning. No one has ever been able to discover its

While the academy has only 24 activa members, there are 100 to 125 associate members. Most of the associates are Basque and the few foreigners among them are linguists. The only non-Basque active member was the late French linguist from Bordeaux, René Lafor. And it was he who put forth the theory that Basque might have originated in Eastern Europe or beyond. Lafor claimed there are substantial similarities with the language called Caucasique, which is native to the center of Soviet Georgia.

"That theory has always been a well-accepted one," Father Villasante said. "But other linguists, some as highly regarded as Lafor, have expressed strong doubts. Some believe our origins lie in Berber, an ancient North African tongue. The important thing is that we simply don't know."

Accepting that, one of the basic facts of Basque life is that nothing is owed linguistically to the Iberian Peninsula.

Many of the monks at Santuario de Aranzazu speak and write Basque, but the academy is there only because of Pather Villasante. There is no religious or political affiliation. The group operates with the assistance of the Spanish govern-ment and the blessings of the monastery and their only interests are in preserving the Basque language.

"We want to keep it alive. We want to keep it from disappearing." Father Villasante said. "We must keep the language current with the lives of the people who speak it, and therefore we need dictionaries, original works and translations. That's the real job of the academy."

In the area of translations, they have made progress over the past few years, trying to huild a basic library of both traditional and modern literature. There are now volumes in Basque by, among others, Aldous Huxley ("Bravs New World") Karl Marx ("Des Kapital"), Voltaire ("Candide"). Robert Louis Stevenson ("Treasure Island"). Mark Twain ("The Adventures of Tom Sawyer") and four titles under the name

"Getting books into print is only a step. There have to be students to read those books. There are no real schools to solidify the traditions of the language. Without a watchdog, the language is diluted by regional differences and slang and finally, after generations of misuse, it fades into oblivion. In Basque, we're very late getting started and we have a lot of catching up to do."

The author of several books in Branish and Basque, including "The History of Basque Literature," Father Villasante notes that the problem of regional differences is especially "In the Basque provinces of Spain, you'll hear people use the word csan for the verb to say. In the Basque provinces of France, however, it becomes erran, and no one knows why. In Spanish, the letter h' is pronounced. In French, the 'h' sound is left out. So the Basque for word is hitz in San Sebastian and itz in Bayonne, even when it's written."

Besque is now taught in some Spanish schools for stuents who wish to take it as a foreign language. But Father Villasante feels that things will only be further complicated unless it is taught the same way everywhere.

"There is a great need for standardization," he said. "The academy is trying to set the examples, but the language is so complicated that only Basques who have grown up speaking can really handle it. I'm afraid that makes it a terribly difficult thing to teach."

As a language it seems to defy most of the rules of gram-As a language it seems to dely most of the rules of grammar, sentence structure and spelling of Western languages.

Also, words are frequently well-endowed with such letters as "x" and "k" and "z" and "r," making for pronunciation stumbling blocks. For example, "bracelet" is eskumuturreko, "geyser" is zirrizia, "relation" is adizkidetasun and "thirty" is adizkidetasun and "thirty". is honoitahamar.

Father Villasante and the academy might indeed have a lot of catching up to do. A legend notes that some years ago the Devil tried to learn Basque so that he could go among the people and tempt them. It seems he gave up after seven years, having only mastered the words for "yes" and "no." PEOPLE:
